To whom it may concern,

"As raw milk consumers we desire:

- Easy access to clean, unprocessed milk from local dairies with healthy cattle that are grass fed only
- FSANZ to reassess outdated science and non-science which condemns raw milk as a carrier of pathogens and consider science based recommendations for consumption of raw milk.
- Certification of raw milk which ensures its cleanliness and its healthful properties remain intact
- Regulations which require raw milk and raw cheeses to be traded ONLY via localised, cottage industry "

Yes!! Pleeeeeeeease! There are many of us that are literally desperate to get hold of this amazing new (but at the same time very old) concept of "raw milk". An item which many generations before us took for granted and consumed on a daily basis, we are now resorting to scrounging the internet for possible sources of this milk. We email, telephone and use word of mouth in desperation to find a reliable and consistent source. I myself have only discovered this milk a few months ago and have had MASSIVE health benefits from it - a reduction in my acne, irritable bowel and chronic fatigue syndrome symptoms. I was not able to get my milk for a week not long ago and in that short space of time all these symptoms flared up again. This morning my stockist informed me she is no longer getting the milk because she was losing money with how hard it is to go and pick it up etc. I am devastated and know that I can now look forward to a massive deterioration in my health progress until I can find a new supplier. Please make this easier for us.

We are at the point of begging.

Most sincerely,
Melissa
