Because of the disastrous side effects and adverse reactions seen as a result of forced use of genetically engineered therapies aka "vaccines" it is of the utmost importance that precaution is needed and that informed consent by the public is impossible without rigorous precautionary scrutiny being first carried out on any product of this type, Lack of informed consent is profoundly undemocratic and is a violation of the Nuremberg Code -- no experimentation on humans without fully informed consent. At present with the woefully inadequate testing that claims to have been done regarding this product and its likely side effects it is imperative that all regulating bodies take a step back in the interest of caution, democracy, informed consent and science. Failure to do so would be to make a mockery of the already listed interests and would probably make obvious the regulatory capture that is running roughshod over the interests of the people.
