I do not wish to support any changes to the label for Alcohol and Pregnancy warning labels which have barely had a chance to make an impact in terms of reducing drinking during pregnancy and thus saving harm to unborn children. The current mandated best practice label should be retained. I think the label that is red, black and white is already in the best colours. These colours get the label noticed and that is what we want. Black only will not get the label noticed so well at all. It would weaken the label and its impact. I would always love to see a size increase in the label as current ones seem way too small.

Thanks,
